Public Consultation Subcommittee Report
To the Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners
Re: Fall 2015 Public Consultation
As at September 4, 2015

As a follow up to the successful June 16, 2015 Public Consultation convened by the Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners, the Subcommittee recommends that a second event take place, as planned originally, in the fall of 2015.

Approximately 100 people participated in-person at the June Consultation, in addition to approximately 200 more who listened to the proceedings online that evening. The focus of discussion at that event was "creating a culture of community safety".

In order to gather additional public input, the Subcommittee recommends the following format and focus for a fall 2015 Consultation:

Logistics:

Date: Wednesday, October 7, 2015

Time: 7:00 p.m. to 9:15 p.m.

Location: TCU Place, Room B

Purpose and Intended Outcomes:

- Communicate the oversight role of the Police Commission relative to the Saskatoon Police Service.
- Communicate the commitment and responsibility of the Police Commission to review policing operations and undertake "value measurement" on behalf of the public.
- Communicate trends and changes that are occurring with policing nationally and locally.
- Gather the public's opinions on police service options and priorities.

Preliminary Format Plans:

- Welcome, communication about intended outcomes of the Consultation, and introduction of members of the Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners.
- Address by Dr. Linda Duxbury, a highly recognized subject matter expert in the area of national trends with police services, identification of core police services, and the types of decisions communities need to make in order to cause change in their policing models.
- Description of the role of the Consultation in a police service value review.
- Round table discussions by participants on key issues.
- Reporting back on the participant discussion at the conclusion of the Consultation.
- A detailed report for the Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners on the public input from the Consultation.

Re: Medical Marijuana Dispensary Regulations

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to request the opportunity to speak to Council at its next regular business meeting, regarding the above item.

I would like to ask Council to formally consider implementing 'Medical Marijuana Dispensary Regulations' in the City of Saskatoon.

As many of you may be aware, the City of Vancouver recently took the step of regulating the over 100 medical marijuana dispensaries in their city. The regulations they developed provide us some solid framework to create and implement similar regulations here in Saskatoon.

Here is a copy of the regulations recently passed in Vancouver for reference:

<http://former.vancouver.ca/ctyclerk/ecclerk/20150428/documents/rr1.pdf>

These steps being taken in Vancouver and other parts of the country are being driven in response to failed and backwards Federal medical marijuana policies. Policies that are preventing sick and dying people from accessing medical marijuana. It's for that reason medical marijuana dispensaries are being founded across the country - to help fill the gaps of a dysfunctional federal program.

To fully understand the need for community based medical marijuana dispensaries, we first need to examine the problem areas of the current federal regulations:

(First, here is an article from the Huff last year outlining some of the issues with the MMPR: http://www.huffingtonpost.ca/jenna-valleriani/mmpr_b_5412402.html)

Price.

For many patients, ordering their medical marijuana through the federal government program isn't possible as it's simply too expensive. Not in all cases, but some. Prices fluctuate wildly between Licensed Producers (LP) - from anywhere to $4/gram to $24/gram - so it depends which LP a patient orders from (it's also worth noting here, that at times patients aren't always given a choice in the LP they have to order from. I'll explain that further in another section).

And it isn't always necessarily the price per gram that is restrictive; sometimes it's the minimum amount one is required to order at a time. Minimums that run anywhere from 10 to 30 grams. We have had many patients call with stories of them finally receiving a prescription; only to sign up with an LP to find out they can't afford the minimum order amount.

One of those conversations sticks out in my mind in particular. We recently worked with this very sweet, 24 year old girl who was seeking a prescription to help manage her severe form of epilepsy. She was struggling mightily with the pharmaceuticals she was on, and was desperate for an alternative. She was adamant right from the start she only wanted to access high CBD cannabis oil, as it is non-psychoactive, and she didn't want to feel 'high'. She told me on numerous occasions 'she just wanted to be well enough to go to school and finish her degree.'

Well after 2 months of working on it, she was finally issued a prescription. I'll never forget the Saturday morning she called. She was in tears, feeling completely defeated. She had just logged in to make her first order from her LP, only to find there was a 30g minimum order on the CBD strain she required, and it was $16/g. With shipping on top, she needed over $500 on a credit card to be able to order, or she got nothing. She told me through tears she only had $100, and asked what she could do. I told her to come and see us and we would sell her $100 worth of medicine. Which we did. And would do again a thousand times out of a thousand.

Shipping

Another requirement of the current federal regulations is patients must have their medicine sent to them to their home address via Canada Post. This brings about a number of potential issues for patients.

The first and most obvious is the cost of shipping. Many medical marijuana patients are sick and disabled to the point they cannot work and are therefore, are low income. Any additional costs added to their medicine are obviously problematic for them.

The next issue with shipping is in regards to logistics. We have heard many patients express concern around having their packages delivered to their homes while they are at work, as the packages then sit in their mailbox or leaned up against their front door for the day. The concern of course is the package could be stolen, or worse yet found by their, or someone else's children.

Having packages shipped to some areas in rural SK can be problematic as well. We recently had a member join our club that has been struggling with this very issue. He attempted to follow the legal channel and order through a LP, only to run into problems with shipping. Due to his remote location, Canada Post does not provide courier services to his small town. So the packages must come via Purolator, who only deliver to his town once a week. And then his only option is to have the package left at the local gas station for him to pick up.

He told me of his embarrassment of picking up his first order that he had shipped from his LP (which took nearly 2 weeks to arrive). He said the lady working at the store made a joke about him 'picking up his weed' as the package was very large and quite obviously contained marijuana. He added, 'it was not long before several other people in the community were gossiping of his marijuana use.'

Should a poor man battling cancer, simply seeking cannabis to manage his nausea from intense chemotherapy, have to endure such embarrassment and inconvenience in accessing his medicine? Of course not.

Wait times.

These inconveniences come in a number of forms. The first comes in the form of waiting lists just to join some LP's. These lists are less common than they were just months ago, but certainly still exist. We have spoken with a number of patients who have been on a waiting list of an LP for over 6 months. Are patients really expected to go without medicine for months while they sit on a waiting list to join an LP?

More recently I heard from a patient who was attempting to register with an LP but was having difficulty. His complaint wasn't that he was placed on a waiting list, but rather after 5 weeks of emailing and calling the LP, he had yet to receive a response from them. He called wondering what to do as he was in great pain, but didn't want to have to go buy off the street.

The next inconvenience comes in the way of shipments arriving late. As many of us know, and as I experience on a regular basis, Canada Post is not exactly punctual with their deliveries a large percentage of the time (which doesn't appear to bother them all that much). We often have patients seek us out late on a Friday as their shipments are late again, and they are faced with going without medicine for the weekend.

And before some of you roll your eyes and say, sure – 'weed for the weekend; what an emergency.' For a very large part, these are cancer patients dealing with terrible side effects of chemotherapy, MS and epilepsy suffers, and so on. Going without medicine for any period of time is not something anything these patients should have to worry about. Worrying about being sick is enough.

Patients are forbidden from asking questions about the medicine they are ordering.

Unbelievable, right? I mean, could you imagine going to the pharmacy, picking up your prescription, and while you're there asking your pharmacist a question about your medicine to have them reply 'I am sorry, Health Canada has forbidden us from answering any questions about your medicine.'? I am assuming most of us would be outraged.

Well that's exactly what is going on when patients are filling their marijuana prescription (I know Health Canada prefers medical document, to 'prescription', but it is for all intents and purposes of this discussion, it's a prescription). Health Canada has actually forbidden LP's from making any 'health benefit claims' regarding the medical marijuana they distribute. Want to know from your LP, which strain of theirs is best for sleep, and which one is best for muscle spasms? Sorry, you're on your own.

So here is how this plays out in the real world. I recently received a call from a very kind 64 year- old Mennonite woman in who lives in rural SK recently. She explained she was suffering with cancer, and the terrible side effects of chemotherapy. Her doctor recommended medical marijuana, and provided her a prescription (she also indicated to me what a nerve racking process this was for her, as she has never used marijuana in her life, and her family was very against her doing so).

Upon receiving her prescription and after registering with a local LP, she logged on to their website, to find over 30 different strains all seemingly different. So she contacted her LP to ask which strain would be best for her to use for her nausea from her chemotherapy. Well you can imagine her shock when the gal on the other end of the phone told her 'They weren't allowed to say'. She then called and asked me if this was some sort of sick joke. I told her I often wonder the same thing.

Patients are unable to purchase cannabis edibles and extracts.

One of the most common reasons (maybe second to only cost) people seek membership with us, is to obtain a safe, quality supply of edibles and extracts, of which both items LP's are forbidden to sell. This is tough to believe following the recent unanimous Supreme Court decision that clearly stated patients have a right to possess and consume all derivatives of cannabis. So patients can legally possess and consume them, but have no safe, legal supply of the products to access. They are left to buy on the black market, or attempt to make the products themselves. This is problematic for a number of reasons.

The first concern surrounds patients making their own cannabis extracts. The most popular way to do so these days is by using a butane extraction method. One, that can be very dangerous, and is responsible for many recent explosions, injuries and deaths. I know this to be true for sure as (more here: <http://www.times-standard.com/general-news/20150621/officials-hash-oil-lab-explosions-becoming-more-common>)

Do we really want these butane hash labs operating underground? In garages next to your house, or mine? Or worse yet, next to a school, or playground? Obviously not. But that's exactly what is happening with no safe, legal supply of extracts available.

The next concern is the inability of patients to purchase edible products from LP's. For those with lung cancer, asthma, etc. smoking and vaporizing is not an option, period. For many others, they simply prefer edibles over smoking/vaping as it is a much healthier way of ingesting their medicine.

And for those that claim that edible sales aren't necessary, because patients can simply make their own, I must refute. I recently spoke with an elderly lady from Saskatoon (recently diagnosed with cancer) whom told me of her first experience making edibles for herself. She told me it was her doctor that suggested she use marijuana to help treat the side effects of her chemotherapy. She was reluctant at first as she is 67 and had never tried marijuana before, but eventually decided to try it.

She registered with a local LP, and contacted them to make her first order. As she had never smoked before, she was wanting to purchase edibles rather than dried marijuana. She was told the LP was forbidden from selling edibles, but that they could send her a recipe and she could make them herself. Which she ultimately did. And as she described to me, 'it went horribly wrong'. She made a mistake, and added too much oil, which made her so high she didn't get out of bed for two days. For obvious reasons she was unwilling to try and make them again, and just wanted to be able to come in and buy them somewhere and be able get advice on how much to take.

Providing clean, safe, properly dosed and packaged edibles and extracts to patients is simple, progressive matter of harm reduction. We are not going to stop people from accessing and using these products, it's prudent we do the sensible thing and provide a safe supply.

Product shortages.

Product shortages are another issue. Again the issue varies, depending which LP one is using. But it's an issue we hear about from patients regularly.

The most common complaint is customers of one of the more popular LP's, Tilray. Tilray regularly runs out certain strain types, and sometimes runs out of medicine entirely. Leaving patients with no medicine, and no concrete timeline as to when they may be able to access more. I have had patients describe the process of buying their medicine through Tilray, as very similar to buying concert tickets. Patients receive a notice via email, that a product will be available for sale at a certain time and date online. Patients then have just minutes to race each other to place their orders online, before the available products runs out, which usually happens within minutes.

And as we hear regularly, these 'release times' are generally during business hours on weekdays. So if you're a Tilray customer and work regular full time hours (8-5, M-F) and aren't able to be online at the time of the product release to place your order, you are simply out of luck.

Again, I would compare this to a situation where you and I head to our local pharmacy to fill a prescription for a medicine we urgently need, to have them tell us they are sorry, but they are out of that type of medicine, and they are not sure when they may have any in stock again. But to watch your email, as they will send an exciting product release announcement, when they have some new stock in.

We would most likely leave and just go to a different pharmacy that did have stock, and get our prescription filled. Unfortunately for most seeking to fill their marijuana prescription, this just isn't an option. Generally patients are signed up with just one LP, and Health Canada has purposefully made it difficult to switch membership from one LP to another. In order to do so, one would need to go back to their doctor, have a new prescription issued, and then go through the registration process again. Which could take weeks (provided there is no waiting list).

Patients are required to have the skills and resources to access a computer, printer and scanner to register with a licensed producer and to regularly place orders.

I know many peoples reaction to this issue is going to be 'come on, who in 2015 doesn't have access to a computer?' The answer might surprise most. It certainly surprised me, anyway. I have had several seniors contact me recently and tell me they don't have a computer and wouldn't know how to work one if they did. This is very frustrating for them. They often ask why they can't just go down to the pharmacy and purchase it like all their other medications. I don't have a good answer to offer them.

Should someone not be able to access medicine simply because they aren't computer literate, or have access to the proper equipment? I think we could all agree that is unnecessarily unfair.

Not long ago, an elderly lady contacted me who was recently diagnosed with Cancer, and was in search of a medical marijuana prescription. I explained that I could email her registration forms, and we could set up an appointment via Skype with a doctor in Ontario. There was a long pause on the other end. She went on to tell me she doesn't have a computer, and has honestly never even used one before. 'Well what am I supposed to do now?' she asked.

So I did the logical thing, and brought printed copies of the forms to her home and helped her complete them. And returned when it was time for her Skype appointment, so she could use my laptop. And once that was all done, I assisted here in placing an order with a LP. She was very grateful and thanked me many times for helping her out, as she said she would have never figured it out on her own.

And more recently, we have encountered a number of patients new to Canada, who's first language is not English, that have been struggling mightily to understand and navigate the MMPR system. We as a club have of course been happy to help them when we can.

All of the above people, have been incredibly grateful for the help they received without a doubt. And they have all made one thing very clear – 'if it wasn't for our help, they would have never been able to do it on their own.' I have quite literally heard that very sentiment, dozens and dozens of times.

And that is the reality on the ground. These regulations are restrictive and confusing, and some people simply need help navigating them.

It is nearly impossible to obtain a medical marijuana 'prescription' in Saskatchewan.

This a problem that is particularly bad here in the Prairie Provinces, in comparison to the rest of the country. While Ontario and BC have clinics devoted to just medical marijuana prescriptions popping up at a fast pace, while here we sit in Saskatchewan where as usual, things are the opposite.

And it is The College of Physicians and Surgeons in Saskatchewan's that deserves the blame for this. It is they, who place unreasonable amounts of pressure on their doctors in this province to NOT prescribe marijuana for ANY reason. It is they who have created ridiculously restrictive, onerous and purposefully time-consuming regulations doctors must adhere to. (The worst of which is the regulation that states – 'in order for a doctor to prescribe marijuana, he/she must be the primary treating physician'. Essentially meaning patients are forbidden from seeking a second opinion when it comes to marijuana. This provision doesn't exist for any other prescription drug, why marijuana?)

We know these issues exist, because we are hearing from patients buy the hundreds, who have been denied prescriptions. Sick and disabled people. People with cancer, MS, epilepsy. AIDS, spinal cord injuries, and so on. Patients that are continually being told to go the street and find their marijuana because doctors feel they are unable to prescribe it. Can you imagine a kind, innocent 65-year-old lady suffering with the side effects of chemotherapy, being told to go 'buy it on the street'? Well, it's happening. More than most could imagine.

If anyone needs evidence of someone being unjustly denied a prescription, see the article that ran in yesterdays Star Phoenix:

<http://www.thestarphoenix.com/prescription+denied/11227796/story.html>

Now I know some of us may have differing opinions on how to manage marijuana policy, but I am sure we can all agree that there is no logical reason in the world to keep that poor man from accessing the only thing in the world that grants him effective pain relief.

Another point to make clear in regards to the above article, is that when this poor man was denied his prescription, and ultimately escalated his complaint to the College of Physicians in Saskatchewan, they were so turned around they didn't know what to tell him. They had no way of helping him. So they sent him in the direction of our Compassion Club for help. Where we were able to get him his prescription back, and help him access the proper meds he requires. Yes, the same club that the Saskatoon police maintain is illegal and will be closed down if opened.

It unfortunately doesn't stop there. The problem with doctors not prescribing in SK, is it's forcing patients to look to doctor's outside of the province for their prescriptions. The obvious pitfall to this is the appointment costs to see a doctor in another province via Skype, run anywhere between $250-$550.

But this brings about whole other issue that most don't even realize exists. Many of the clinics and doctors that offer Skype appointments in other provinces, have arrangements with certain LP's, in that for every patient the clinic refers to the LP, they receive a referral credit of some sort back from the LP. It's a crafty way of the LP's building their membership basis.

What it equates to, is once a patients appointment is completed, and they have been issued a prescription, they are often then told which LP they must use, rather than choosing for themselves. This is problematic for obvious reasons.

So, there it is. Our federal medical marijuana program in a nutshell. An ugly, tangled web of failed policies.

So what's the answer? Community based medical marijuana dispensaries. It's simple – patients deserve to access their medicine safely, with dignity, and at fair and reasonable price. They deserve to be able to come in and look, smell, touch and feel their medicine, and ask knowledgeable people questions about it. It just makes sense.

And that's exactly why we have established The Saskatchewan Compassion Club here in Saskatoon. To help chronically and terminally ill people in our community access their medicine in a fair manner. But dispensing medicine is only a small part of what we do in the big scheme of things. The majority of our time is spent consulting with patients on a variety of matters, from assistance to seeking medical marijuana prescriptions to assistance with advocacy matters when patients have been treated unfairly.

We will also soon be offering addictions counselling, nutritional counselling and planning services, as well as massage services at no cost to our members. We truly are excited to give back in every way we can. And as a non-profit group, all of the profits generated from our club are donated back to various groups in our community.

And as far as our club goes here in Saskatoon, can we not all agree that if the College of Physicians in Saskatchewan are now referring patients our clubs way, and local doctors are at times actually requiring their patients see us rather than a Licensed Producer, that we are already playing a very necessary role in filling those gaps left by an dysfunctional system?

With that said, we believe having regulations are just as important than having the clubs themselves. Because regulations ensure that clubs operate in a manner that is helpful to the community, not harmful. Regulations ensure the continued protection of our children, and prevent the involvement of organized crime. Without regulations, we leave those things to chance.

So lets regulate. Just like other municipalities in BC have already done, and as many others across the country are strongly considering doing soon. Here is a summary of those cities currently dealing with regulating:

So in closing, we would like to propose all relevant stakeholders in our city - be it City Council, the Police, and Public Health – come the table to create and implement medical marijuana dispensary regulations, as soon as reasonably possible.

Time is certainly of the essence. We have chronically and terminally ill people in our community that are needlessly suffering - at times horribly. We have the opportunity right now to take reasonable steps and something about it. Let's not let that opportunity pass us by.

I would like to thank you all for your time and consideration of these important issues. If anyone has any questions or comments, please don't hesitate to contact the club, or myself directly. I can be reached anytime on my cell @ 306-716-9874 or by email @ saskcompassion@gmail.com.

Sincerely,

Mark Hauk

August 21, 2015

His Worship the Mayor and Members of City Council,

This letter is a formal request to speak at the next Standing Policy Committee on Planning, Development and Community Services (September 8th) as well as the Board of Police Commissioners (September 14th).

On August 17, 2015, Mr. Mark Hauk, Founder and Operator of the Saskatchewan Compassion Club was heard by the Standing Policy Committee on Planning, Development and Community Services (agenda item 6.3.2) with a resolution to move the topic of regulating medical marijuana dispensaries in the city of Saskatoon to report phase, with consultation with the Board of Police Commissioners, to be executed by October of this year.

I am contacting you today not only as one of your city's employers of 125 full and part-time employees, but also as the most well established and experienced medical cannabis licensed producer governed by Health Canada and the Federal Government.

The Marihuana for Medical Purposes Regulations (MMPR) was introduced in 2013 to precisely stop what Mr. Hauk and other dispensary and compassion club owners across Canada are endeavouring to do. RCMP reports used in the development of the MMPR program clearly articulated that the proliferation of dispensaries and cannabis clubs in any community comes with the significant disadvantage that they also sell to minors, are often a front or connected to organized crime and typically are a storefront gateway to much stronger recreational drugs like cocaine and heroin.

Keeping it strictly to 'medical' cannabis, there are no regulations or guidelines that compassion clubs need to follow that allows them to have a cannabis product determined to be 'medical'. Studies have shown that cannabis purchased from dispensaries frequently contain heavy metals, pesticides, mould and other contaminants. By thinking about the health and wellbeing of sick and immunocompromised constituents it is unconscionable not to ensure the safety of their medicine.

There is a multitude of reasons why the MMPR exists and for licensed producers across Canada to be the only source of true medical cannabis:

1. Regulations ensure that cannabis is grown in tightly-controlled environments using the most sophisticated security and tamper resistant containers;
2. Regulations ensure that the production standards are set to a very high level with the added insistence on quality control testing by a 3rd party company prior to release to a patient;
3. Regulations ensure that there are tracking mechanisms in place in the unlikely event there is a recall that the affected patients can be contacted immediately;
4. Regulations ensure that our youth are not exposed to cannabis during their formidable brain development years. Data shows that early cannabis exposure can lead to significant consequences; and
5. Regulations ensure that facilities and production systems are following all federal, provincial and municipal regulations.

Mr. Hauk was inaccurate in many points that he shared with the Council and should be clarified before a report is drafted for consideration.

Patients Cannot Access Medical Cannabis

Using Health Canada market analysis data as a guide (<http://www.hc-sc.gc.ca/dhp-mps/marihuana/info/market-marche-eng.php>) in the last quarter where data is available (January 1, 2015-March 31, 2015), access to federally regulated medical cannabis is not a current problem under the federally mandated Marihuana for Medical Purposes Regulations (MMPR). In this identified quarter, 979 kilograms were sold to clients, 1,786 kilograms were produced and there was a total of 4,481 kilograms of medical cannabis in licensed producers' inventories at the end of the quarter. This clearly demonstrates that access to federally approved cannabis is not an issue in this country.

This also clearly speaks to his point about shortages – there is no shortage of federally regulated, legal, medical cannabis in Canada.

Delivery issues

Mr. Hauk mentioned that clients in rural Saskatchewan have a challenge with receiving their product shipment shorter than two to three weeks. While we cannot speak for other licensed producers in Canada and their delivery successes, we can speak to our own record that once a patient is registered with CanniMed and places their order either over the phone or on our secure website, they will receive their shipment within 24-48 hours, even in the most remote corners of the province or even country.

Customer Service/Compassion

We are very proud of our customer service team, which includes an on-site pharmacist. Patients are free to call us for advise, dosing and product selection help and overall customer support. We field 100-400 calls every week and the most recent customer satisfaction survey demonstrated that 97 per cent of our patients would recommend us to others.

Cannabis clubs or dispensaries do not sell medical cannabis. Quite simply, these storefront operations should be seen as drug traffickers and held to that charge in every instance. There is absolutely nothing "medical" about what is sold through dispensaries as there is no system of accountability, no inventory controls, no safety protocol production compliance, and no legitimate doctor approvals, etc.

We do not need smart regulations on this matter, we need to full implement and enforce the Federal medical cannabis program and allow licensed producers to grow medically-advanced, safe and secure products that are dispensed discretely and quickly to patients across the country who have the valid approval and medical documents signed by their practicing physician.

I hope that you will welcome me to speak at the next meetings pertaining to this issue.

Sincerely,

Brent H. Zettl

To: The City of Saskatoon

Dear Honourable Mayor and Council Members,

My name is Fred Glawischnig, a proud resident of Saskatchewan. The purpose of this letter is to discuss the recent opening of a medical marijuana dispensary within the city. I have been following these events in the press and felt it was necessary to contact your office. I write this letter as a person who is very familiar and well informed upon the topic of the Medical Marijuana Access Regulations (MMAR), Medical Marijuana Purposes Regulations (MMPR, and the Licenced Producer (LP) Programs available for Medical Marijuana Patients. (Experience available upon request.)

The "Medical Marijuana Dispensary" hereafter referred to as the Dispensary is not selling a Medical product, or a Health Canada Approved medicine. To clarify this product has not undergone the same process as the Licenced Producer program for Medicine.

There a great many people who would say, "So what? It's just a plant!" If you are one of them, I urge you to continue to read this letter to educate yourself about what you are putting in your body and to know the difference between a product versus a medicine.

Let's begin with a look at the current system based on the Health Canada Licenced Producer (HCLP) program. A company that is interested in producing licensed medical marijuana is required to undergo a vigorous screening for security, quality assurance, quality control, and follow very strict regulations to produce a safe and stable medicine.

This emerging industry requires significant investment to produce clean and stable medicine to be purchased by Canada's Medical Marijuana Patients. This industries investment takes the form of:

- Land
- Construction of buildings,
- Training employees,
- Cutting edge technology and equipment, and
- Distribution networks,
- Tax revenue employment and
- GST revenue.

The HCLP is an emerging industry that is on its way based on a solid foundation of safety and security of patients and communities.

Let's look at HCLP medicine - how is it sold? When a patient is issued a prescription from their Doctor, they can choose a provider of their medicine via the Health Canada website. The website contains valuable information, including a list of current Licensed Producers. Once the patient chooses a provider, they have the Licensed Producer help process their prescription to Health Canada. The information is verified by Health Canada to be sure of compliance with the MMAR. Upon approval, you may order your medicine via Smart Phone App, Online Store or telephone. The medicine is usually shipped that day. Once your first order arrives, you may order according to the prescription amount. The Licensed Producer is the dispensary of the medicine and usage is monitored by a Doctor. During this process the rights, privacy, safety and dignity of the patient are protected and respected. In addition, no laws are broken.

I have personally used the HCLP ordering system for a loved one. My experience with Saskatoon's CanniMed to be just as described above. CanniMed's staff was very helpful and explained the process in a very professional manner. The ordering process was flawless. I communicated with professional staff and was impressed with attention to detail that was given in every aspect from creating to shipping of their medicine.

Health Canada Licensed Producers	Dispensary Product
1. Quality Control I/ Quality Assurance regulations run by Health Canada.	1. No oversight
2. Able to recall inventory by product number and Customer	2. Not able to recall inventory
3. Laboratory tested product	3. No laboratory testing
4. Supports Canadian jobs	4. Supports Illegal Activity
5. Health Canada Regulations and procedures to create stable, consistent medicine	5. No regulations at all and no ability to create consistent quality
6. Provincial Law & Federal Law Supported	6. None. Many communities want it gone. (For example, Delta, BC)
7. Operates with transparency in the law	7. No transparency and fear of the law
8. Expedites MMR Patients and offers discounts for patients in need	8. Encouraging citizens to abuse the system

The above table was created By Canadian Cannabis Solutions Inc., Illustrates 8 areas of comparison between of Licensed Producer Medicine vs. Product sold via dispensary.

A further description of each item:

- 1) QA/QC Quality Assurance and Quality Control - The QA/QC process and regulations are very in depth. Health Canada inspects these facilities on an ongoing basis. Failure to comply may result in shutdown and even loss of the HCLP's licence to produce. The QA/QC procedures are very rigid and inflexible, to such a degree that many Licenced Producers are turned down for inadequate procedures. E.g.: Creative Edge Nutrition's bid for a HCLP licence.
- 2) Recall procedures – All HCLP's must have a recall procedure for all medicine they produce. If someone falls ill and the medicine is suspect the HCLP must recall the entire lot of medicine. Every patient that ordered some medicine from that lot is contacted to ensure the patient's safety. A costly and very necessary step in protecting patient's health.
- 3) Lab Tested - All HCLP's medicine is tested for pesticide residual, mold spores, fungus and chemical analysis. HCLP's may only use a very limited supply of approved pesticides. The HCLP must also keep records of use and it is verified by the QA/QC Dept. and the double checked at the lab to ensure that patients' health is the priority.

Dispensary Product: Not tested to the same standards. Many pesticides used by growers are carcinogenic and systemic not Health Canada approved.

- 4) HCLP supports Canadian jobs. Many people are required to work in these businesses to produce medicine for sick people.

Dispensary Product: purchased all cash and to shield from tax collection.

- 5) Security & Quality Control Regulations - All designed to protect communities and make sure the medicine winds up in the hands of patients.

Dispensary has no regulations. They operate on a promise of not selling to anyone without a card.

- 6) Health Canada Licensed Producers have Provincial and Federal approval.

Dispensary Product: the source of this product is questionable, possibly overstock from people "who grow their own" under the MMAR program. Many communities in BC have policies of no MMAR growers allowed because they have found an increase in crime in their community.

- 7) HCLP Operates with complete legal transparency and are inspected regularly.

Dispensary does not operate legally.

- 8) HCLP has an excellent working relationship with Health Canada to meet the changing needs of Canada's Patients.

Dispensary Product: Teaches people to navigate and abuse the system.

Our current federal government created the current MMR program. Available online at <http://laws-lois.justice.gc.ca>. I urge you to read the MMR program in its entirety and consider the careful words that protect and balance the protection of patients and communities.

As I close this letter, I would like to focus on two questions. The first: What would a dispensary mean to current MMR patients? Current Medical patients will not put their health in the hands of an unknown product. In my opinion, anyone who is bamboozled into using a dispensary over a HCLP has not been given correct information.

And second, would having this business benefit the citizens of Saskatoon? I feel that the beautiful City of Saskatoon has very little to gain allowing an unlicensed drug to be sold to anyone in its community.

If you have any questions or concerns please contact me 306-864-7819. I will be happy to share my knowledge of the HCLP industry and stand by to assist you with further discussions to provide accurate information about an important Health Program.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

Fred Glawischnig

Comments:

Dear council,

I want to express my concern about the light house on 20th street in Saskatoon. I live in a condo on spadina just east of the light house. Over the past few years I have noticed a dramatic increase to the number of intoxicated and homeless appearing people in my area of the down town. I do not feel safe walking our 5 and 7 year old kids to the movie theatre, or midtown plaza past the light house. We are continually harassed for money in an aggressive way and have been followed when refusing to give hem money. The side walk in front of the lift house is always covered in spit and urine. It is absolutely discussing. Why have Laws against spitting in public if they are not being enforced? If they were going to be enforced that is where they should be enforced!!!

The people from the lighthouse are wandering the surrounding area past the lighthouse. We are not free to walk at river landing without being harassed, or on 21st street, the midtown plaza area, and they are even starting to go into the radisson hotel to use the bathrooms.

My suggestion is to move the lighthouse to a different area. Why not next door to the police station or the prison?

I would like to see the city police enforce the no spitting and urinating in public laws in front of the light house. Id like the sidewalk cleaned there more regularly also as it is disgusting to walk past a building whose sidewalk has been a public toilet!!!

Thank you.

Message:

Hello,

I live at 915 Hargreaves Manor.

We have seen a major increase in all terrain vehicles and trucks on the berm behind our home, even late at night.

Seems like the same handful of people every time.

At the end of clay pool drive all the barricade have been pushed to the side for easy access by anyone. No wonder, it's an accessible playground! The city has done nothing to prevent these guys from driving the berm on a daily basis!

My two boys, a 5 and 2 yrs old are constantly in the backyard playing and it terrifies me to think that one of these vehicles could one day roll down the hill or lose control and drive right through that fence and crush our kids.

It is a REAL problem that needs to be addressed!

There really needs to be more effort on the city's part to prevent this access to these berms.

Please, I've called the police several times and they never come.

Please address this issue before someone gets hurt!

Regards,

Marc

Dear Board of Police Commissioners,

I am writing in regards to a recent incident that occurred on the 2300 block of Dufferin on the early morning hours of Friday, July 24th. According to the newspaper report in The Star Phoenix, a man was a victim of a beating / home invasion from persons unknown to him. After the incident occurred, the individual called 911. He was asked if he needed medical attention and he said no, according to him because he couldn't afford the price of an ambulance.

The man expected that police would attend but when no one responded after an hour, he called again. Once again he was asked if he needed medical attention and he said no.

It took 4 - 5 hours for police to attend and when no one answered the door, the police just left and didn't investigate any further. A police spokesperson said that police must prioritize calls and since the individual wasn't in current danger and refused medical attention, he was a lower priority.

Maybe I live in a very middle class mindset, but if this happened to me, I would be petrified. How would the man (or police for that matter) know that these individuals were not coming back? My expectations of the SPS is that when a violent assault occurs or just has occurred, we must respond immediately. If this means calling off-duty police officers in to respond quicker, so be it. Have we become that dulled to crime that we don't find an assault worthy of quick response? That is not the Saskatoon I want to live in.

Please consider reviewing policies and procedures when it comes to violent assaults. I am a big SPS supporter but this case really concerns me.

CFMH Best Practices Review and Dealing with Nuisance Property Bylaw Information

Report Highlights

1. There are best practices that can inform the Saskatoon CFMH program.
2. Other municipalities, primarily in British Columbia have implemented a repeat nuisance abatement bylaw that allows them to impose a fee for service for each nuisance call at a property once a relatively low threshold has been reached (ex. 3 calls for service in a year or more than 2 service calls in a 24 hour period) and a time period for remediation has passed. This practice is implemented as a last resort once other entreaties and options have failed to produce a change at the property.
3. In 2014, a few rental property and temporary accommodation addresses received exceptionally high Saskatoon Police service levels to deal with nuisance properties. Two properties that offer temporary/rental accommodation accounted for over 2000 calls for service last year.
4. In 2014, the 20 properties with the highest calls for service generated over 5000 calls.
5. The owners / managers of these properties are making excessive use of the City's emergency services in lieu of managing their properties sustainably.

Strategic Goal(s)

The information in this report may be utilized to address the quality of life in Saskatoon by reducing and preventing crime and providing appropriate service levels to address ongoing problems at properties. The report supports continuous improvement of the City of Saskatoon by providing information about how other municipalities support health and safety as a top priority. Emerging trends have been identified. This report identifies a targeted opportunity to implement specific continuous improvement tools within the City's emergency response and to reflect best practices from other jurisdictions.

Background

When the Crime Free Multi-Housing program was established in Saskatoon, a survey was undertaken of other programs across the county. A proposal was developed that reviewed the best practices from those programs and was adopted by City Council in 2008. This proposal has guided the CFMH program through the first five years of development. All goals within the proposal have been realized with the exception of the staff resourcing. Currently the program is staffed with one full time permanent Coordinator position, one temporary full-time Assistant Coordinator position and one 0.4% FTE Administrative Assistant position.

While there are CFMH programs that exist in isolated communities throughout Canada, British Columbia has been the most successful in implementing the strategy throughout the lower Mainland and in many other communities, in part due to a provincial crime prevention association. Currently nuisance abatement bylaws that provide remedy for repeat nuisance service calls have been implemented in several communities in British Columbia where the CFMH program has a strong presence.

Since 2008, the CFMH program has continued to expand in British Columbia, due to provincial influence and support. One key addition to the program in B. C. has been the addition of repeat nuisance abatement by-laws to address the problem of properties choosing not to participate in the CFMH program and continuing to draw on emergency services to address the behavioral nuisances.

Saskatoon City Council passed the Property Maintenance and Nuisance Abatement bylaw in 2003. The bylaw addresses the condition of the property and remediation, but does not address the issue of the demand on emergency services. A nuisance can result from the physical condition of a property, but it can also be the result of the behavior of the people using or living at the property.

CFMH Best Practices

The CFMH base program is designed to be flexible to allow communities to address particular local problems. Many CFMH best practices are implemented to deal with particular local problems. As an example, in certain communities in the lower main land of British Columbia, there are significant problems with grow ops and illegal drug labs. In Saskatoon, the CFMH program has implemented community events such as a barbecue for the Pleasant Hill neighborhood to try to develop community connections since this area contains 15% of Saskatoon's multi-family rental accommodation. Best practices that deal with local scenarios have not been included in this report. Some of the best practices from other communities include:

1. Business licenses for rental property implemented in several communities in British Columbia. The business license allows an inspector to check on a property prior to the business license being granted or renewed. The CFMH program provides recommendations on standards for rental properties including:
 - a. a record of current tenancy (tenant registry),
 - b. proper tenant screening,
 - c. ongoing property management including monitoring tenant behavior, documenting and addressing infractions of tenant agreements and
 - d. maintaining the physical condition of the rental property.
2. Repeat/Excessive nuisance abatement property bylaw. This addition has provided several cities in British Columbia with a mechanism to charge a fee for service (See Appendix A for a summary of the fees) for a fixed period of time (ex. 2 years) once a threshold of nuisance calls has been exceeded. A warning is provided and properties have a period of time (ex. 60 days) to rectify the problem prior to the abatement fee being put in place. The CFMH program and other civic departments monitor the calls to properties and recommend properties to be placed under the abatement bylaw.
3. Mandatory criminal record checks for all residents of CFMH properties has been applied in Ottawa since 2008. The Ottawa CFMH program supports the provision of record checks. In Ottawa, the CFMH program deals primarily with one social housing agency.
4. The Edmonton and Saskatoon CFMH programs have implemented a process to provide information from Police reports to CFMH certified properties. An application for information is provided to the CFMH office by a landlord along with a copy of the CFMH lease addendum document, which the tenant has signed indicating they have provided permission for the release of the Police information. The landlord must sign a legal contract indicating that the information may only be used for the purpose of seeking an eviction.

5. At least one community in British Columbia has implemented a practice of providing a letter to thank rental apartment residents who have provided information to Police related to a problem at the property. Often residents may be intimidated to call Police despite the ongoing risk to their own safety and security. This practice may encourage more people to report concerns to the police service.
6. Several communities have implemented other Crime Free (CF) programs including CF condo, CF Hotel/Motel, CF single family rental, CF Business and CF Storage Containers to address particular issues within their communities.

Details on the specifics of the implementation of best practices in each community can be found in Appendix B.

Nuisance Properties

Most communities (with a CFMH program) have already regulated nuisance properties. The nuisance property bylaws address issues with the physical condition of the property. A few communities have recognized that a nuisance may also be defined by behavior, which will generally require emergency services response. These communities have implemented an excessive nuisance abatement fee for service.

In Saskatoon, the Property Maintenance and Nuisance Property Bylaw, nuisance is defined as

- (i) A condition of property; or
- (ii) A thing;
that affects or may affect the amenity of a neighbourhood or the safety, health and welfare of people in the neighborhood, and includes:
- (iii) A building in ruinous or dilapidated state of repair;
- (iv) An unoccupied building that is damaged and is an imminent danger to public safety;
- (v) Land that is overgrown with grass and weeds;
- (vi) Untidy and unsightly property;
- (vii) Junked vehicles;
- (viii) Open excavations on property.

This definition does not consider the possibility that behavior of the property users may also be a characteristic of a nuisance property that will result in increased demand on emergency services to address the problem. This prolonged demand may be an indication of a loss of management control or the ceding of management control to the proxy of emergency services to deal with problems that management is unable or unwilling to address. Information on the nuisance property calls to Saskatoon's multi-family properties can be found in Appendix C.

In all communities that have implemented an excessive nuisance abatement bylaw, if a threshold number of service calls is exceeded, a warning letter may be issued with a time period to provide the requested remedy. If the problem continues through the warning period and there is no abatement in place at the end of the period, the property is placed under abatement for a period of time (typically 2 years) during which the City may impose upon the owner of that property a fee for service for each additional nuisance service call response within that period. The imposition of the nuisance abatement fees are in addition to the City's right to seek other legal remedies or actions for abatement of the nuisance. Typically this process is only implemented after other remediation actions have been offered and been refused.

Communities with an excessive nuisance abatement option have cautioned that this program was never intended to be generally applicable to all properties that meet the threshold. This program is used as a last resort after numerous other attempts to encourage the property owners to address the problems have been unsuccessful.

Public and/or Stakeholder Involvement

Since the Saskatoon CFMH program was last established in 2010, it has been informed by an advisory committee that represents key stakeholders including representatives from Fire and Protective Service, The Ministry of Justice - Office of Residential Tenancies, The Ministry of Social Services - Sask. Housing Corp, City of Saskatoon Community Services, Saskatchewan Landlords Association, Saskatoon Police as well as rental apartment residents. That committee has reviewed this report.

Other Considerations/Implications

This report has no implications for the areas of policy, finance, Environment, privacy, safety/crime prevention through environmental design (CPTED) and no options considered. No communication plan is required.

Due Date for Follow-up and/or Project Completion

There is no further follow-up or project completion.

Public Notice

Public Notice pursuant to Section 3 of Policy No. C01-021, Public Notice Policy, is not required.

Appendix A - Fees related to Nuisance Abatement

In each community that has implemented a nuisance abatement bylaw, there has been different schedules in place to ensure the costs incurred by “abated” properties reflect the City’s costs. The nuisance service call response fee and administration and overhead fee have been calculated to reflect the actual cost within each community.

Location	Police	City	Admin	Nuisance Call Fee	When Passed?
Victoria	$200/ call (2 officers and 1 vehicle)	$75 / hour	15%		2005
New Westminster (Vancouver)	$250 / hour	$100 / hour	10%		2010
Surrey			$378 / service call	$709 / service call	2014
North Vancouver	$195 / call	$50 / hr	10%		2008
Vernon			$114 / hour		2008
Abbotsford	$195/call Fire -- as prescribed.	$70/ hr			2003
Penticton			yes	Payroll cost + benefits, cost of vehicles, repairs to damaged City equipment.	2012

The CFMH program deals almost exclusively with multi-family housing with 4 units or more. The CFMH program uses a combination of education, support, information, security building requirements and resident engagement to achieve results. The program is not intended to provide emergency services or deal with emergent situations.

In the municipalities that have a CFMH program, the definition of a nuisance property is not defined by the scope of the CFMH program. The CFMH program may administer the bylaw as it relates to their properties, but the bylaw has implications for other service areas.

Nuisance Abatement Implementation

In reviewing information on excessive nuisance abatement, there were two somewhat different practices that had been implemented.

New Westminster and Surrey - 3 or more nuisance service calls within a 12 month period related to abatement of nuisance conduct, activity or condition. Once implemented, the service call fee is implemented for 24 months. 60 day remediation period provided following the warning letter which outlines the requested remediation. New Westminster has had up to 20 properties “on abatement”. Calls are monitored monthly and other steps are generally taken prior to the imposition of the service fee.

Vernon, Abbotsford, Penticton – Good Neighbor bylaw specifies if more than 1 nuisance service call within a 24 hour period or more than 3 nuisance service calls within a 12 month period with response by RCMP, bylaw Enforcement officer or other city official. Service fee implemented for 12 months.

While the thresholds for inclusion in the abatement program are low, the program managers have cautioned that this program was never intended to be generally applicable to all properties that meet the threshold. All communities that have nuisance abatement have mentioned that the program is used as a last resort after numerous other attempts to encourage the property owners to address the problems have been unsuccessful. The abatement program is not conducive to good business relations and is used as a punitive measure once all other avenues have been exhausted.

Other communities that were reviewed include Winnipeg, Mission, Prince Albert, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton. None of these bylaws included provision for repeat emergency service, although there was provision for addressing nuisance problems.

APPENDIX C - Nuisance Property calls to Saskatoon Police related to Multi-family Accommodation

One of the effects noticed over the past 5 years that the CFMH program has existed in Saskatoon has been a concentration of high calls to a few addresses. In the past year, there have been several addresses that tallied very high calls to Saskatoon Police. In 2014, there were 2 locations providing rental/ temporary housing that accounted for over 2000 calls for service to Police. There were 3 additional rental properties that each had between 200 - 250 calls for service in 2014. We have noted over the past year, that the disruption in management at one company that is in the rental apartment market accounted for an increase of 370 additional calls for service at 4 of their sites. If the 20 rental property addresses with the most calls in 2014 were tallied, they account for 5000 calls for service.

Over the past five years, the CFMH program has been able to work with landlords to address some of the problems at their addresses. Many of the landlords that were identified as having high calls in 2010 and have chosen to work with the CFMH program have seen much lower calls in 2014. Properties that have been involved with the CFMH program for a number of years show remarkable improvement in their calls for service.

Your Worship and Members of City Council:

Re: Information Report on Crime Free Multi-Housing Best Practices and Nuisance Properties – A Review of Programs in Canada

On March 19, 2015, the Board of Police Commissioners received the 2014 Annual Report of the Crime Free Multi-Housing Advisory Committee and requested a further report on what other communities are doing with crime-free multi-housing, including information on any "nuisance property" bylaws. The response in this regard has now been considered by the Standing Policy Committee on Planning, Development and Community Services, and forwarded to City Council as information at its meeting to be held on August 20, 2015.

The referenced 2014 Annual Report of the Crime Free Multi-Housing Advisory Committee is attached for information.

1. Executive Summary

Consistently each year since 2010 the Crime Free Multi-Housing (CFMH) program has been able to recruit 2/3 of the rental properties with the highest occurrences. While working with the majority of the most troubled properties, we are able to achieve greater positive change overall when compared with the non-CFMH rental properties.

In Pleasant Hill, the neighborhood that was initially identified in 2010 as the neighborhood with the highest number of rental properties and with the majority of properties with the highest level of occurrences, we have seen remarkable changes. With 75% participation in CFMH, there has been an increase of 15% in the number of properties with low occurrences. Prior to the CFMH program, 27% of the rental properties had a high occurrence rate, this has fallen to 15% with a 17% increase in the number of rental properties with a low occurrence rate. Over the past year we have focused on completing or updating Phase 2 assessments in the neighborhood and have completed over 20 additional property security assessments.

The CFMH program has reached maturity and is resourced with 1 full time and 1 temporary employee renewed on a 6 month basis. Since 2010, more than 325 people have taken the Phase 1 training seminar and almost 200 rental properties have had a security assessment completed. Currently there are 30 properties that are fully certified. In 2014, the focus was on completing the Phase 2 security assessments, continuing to provide ongoing educational seminars for landlords (7 held in 2014) and to plan a significant event in 2015 that would mark the maturity of the program and initiate the first landlord's conference in Saskatchewan. Unfortunately the suspension of the temporary assistant position resulted in the cancellation or scaling back of several key program goals including the landlord's conference scheduled for April, 2015. It is difficult to undertake longer term program goals when resourcing for the program is uncertain. Some goals achieved in 2014 include:

- Phase 1 – intake of 46 new rental properties (5% of Saskatoon market).
- Phase 2 – 25 properties inspected and 36 properties re-assessed for a total of almost 61 properties receiving a security audit in 2014. The recommendations are becoming known in the community and are being incorporated into newer apartment building projects such as the social housing apartment on Camponi Place built in 2014 by Saskatoon Housing Coalition.
- Phase 3 – 6 new properties added – 2 in Central and 3 in Northwest and 1 in East division. A plan to provide some flexibility in the Phase 2 requirements for properties with a low calls for service history should result in a significant increase in certified properties in 2015.

2. Background

2.1. Crime Free Multi-Housing Program Development

Development of the Crime Free Multi-Housing (CFMH) program has continued since January 2010 when the first Phase 1 training seminar was held. Over 350 people have attended the 17 training seminars held since that time. In April, 2012 a 2- year term Community Liaison position was hired to support the work of the program. There was a suspension of the position from October 2014 until March 2015. This term position has been renewed for a 6 month term in 2015.

The phase 1 seminars have reached maturity with the majority of the participants now representing new employees of existing clients. Referrals from existing CFMH partners are resulting in new properties registering for the Phase 1 seminars. The Phase 1 certification must be renewed every 3 years; this maintenance stage of renewal started in 2013 with the introduction of half day seminars focusing on single topics. In 2014, the topics included Residential Tenancies Act, Gangs in Rental Housing, Verbal Judo and Dealing with Domestic Occurrences.

About half of the program rental property addresses have received a Phase 2 security building assessment. These audits review 9 requirements including deadbolt, door and window locks, suite eye viewers, lighting inside and outside, addressing, building image and landscaping as well as providing additional recommendations based on a Crime Prevention through Environmental Design (CPTED) assessment.

Phase 3 is clearly in a developmental stage with only 30 properties represented at this level in the program. The Phase 3 social must be held annually to maintain certification. We are looking at a modified program for properties with one significant deficiency and few calls for service to allow them to address the deficiency over a longer time frame while moving forward in the program.

3. Highlights of the 2014 Year

3.1. Program Summary Year

- Phase 1 -- By the end of 2014, landlords managing 429 (out of 805 TOTAL) rental properties (+11832 suites or 52% of the Saskatoon market) had attended the Phase 1 training seminar. In 2014, three Phase 1 training seminars were held with 74 people attending; 17 of these people represented properties new to the CFMH program (46 sites with 675 rental units). Several of the landlords in the program have purchased additional properties and have identified the CFMH program as a key support for their business expansion.

- Phase 2 - One hundred and ninety six (196) properties have participated in the Phase 2 security audit building assessments with 43 properties having been assessed twice.

In 2013, it was noted that 167 properties that joined the program in 2010 and 2011 had stalled, due to numerous reasons including sale of property, change in personnel or a decision to not proceed with the Phase 2 assessments. In 2014, we were able to reactivate 51 properties. In 2014, there were 61 assessments that were conducted; of these 36 were re-assessments of properties where the assessment was quite dated.

Year of program	# of properties joining CFMH	# in Phase 2 in 2014	% in Phase 2 in 2014	# of properties stalled at Phase 1	# of properties waiting for Phase 2
2010	267	125	47%	88	53
2011	22	9	40%	8	3
2012	59	22	37%	19	18
2013	40	11	27%	1	27
2014	35	7	20%		27
TOTAL	423	174	41%	116	128

- Phase 3 - Thirty (30) properties have completed the program requirements and are currently fully certified by the program. In 2015, we are implementing a modified program that will allow properties with low calls for service and one major security deficiency to address that deficiency over a determined time and proceed in the program.

3.2. Crime and Nuisance Behavior Reduction

We track properties by assessing the number and severity of occurrences¹ at the property. Twice a year, properties are assessed and assigned a score to assist in setting program priorities. We want to ensure that we offer services first to the properties in the program that are struggling with higher occurrences. These properties are targeted to receive invitations to participate in the program or to move to the next phase in the program. Once they are in the program, they continue to receive additional focus and resources.

For this report a simplified version of this tracking has been used that assesses properties at high, moderate or low occurrence levels. An example of a high occurrence level might be assigned to a property in a 1 year period if there was:

- a) A murder at the property
- b) OR 3 aggressive assaults resulting in significant bodily harm
- c) OR 7 break and enters
- d) OR 9 thefts over $5000
- e) OR 8 drug trafficking charges
- f) OR 40 mischief charges (property damage or damage to vehicles)

Most properties have a combination of occurrences that are evaluated using the uniform crime reporting weights assigned by the Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics (CCJS). This system is also used to track crime across Canada and identify changes in cities over time.

There are several results we have noted by tracking these properties using the level of occurrences as a measure. One of the challenges noted prior to the CFMH program being introduced is that about 60% of properties that have high occurrences will be stuck with management practices and policies that support the continuation of the high occurrences.

- 1) The CFMH program continues to target the rental properties with the highest level of occurrences. We are able to consistently recruit and retain about 66% of these properties each year.
- 2) The CFMH program supports positive change happening sooner. If properties with high occurrences participate in the CFMH program, consistently 25% of the properties will move to the low occurrence category within 1 year. If they do not participate, the same percentage (25%) may move to the low occurrence category but it will take at least 2 – 4 years to achieve.
- 3) The CFMH program results in more properties improving their level of occurrences. About 70% of the properties participating in the CFMH program with high occurrences (25+ properties) will significantly improve the level of occurrences within one year. For properties that chose not to participate, about 60 – 70 % will remain in or return to the high occurrence category.
- 4) For properties with low occurrences, consistently 2 – 4% will move to high occurrences (about 15 – 30 rental properties) and 14 – 17% (100 properties) will move to moderate occurrences whether they are involved with the CFMH program or not.

- 5) For all properties with moderate occurrences, over time more will move to low occurrences (40% or about 55 properties in the short term of 1 year, and 65% over longer time of 5 years). The percentage increase is only slightly better (2 – 4%) for CFMH properties in all time frames.
- 6) In the past year about 45 properties moved to the moderate occurrence category. About 30 of these properties moved from the non-participating low occurrence category and about 15 moved from the high occurrence CFMH-participating category. The number of CFMH low occurrence properties was the same as last year.

3.3. Neighborhood Focus

The primary neighborhood focus has continued to be the Pleasant Hill neighborhood, with 106 rental properties identified in the neighborhood; 15% of the multi-family rental properties in Saskatoon. Our focus has resulted in 75 % of the properties in Pleasant Hill participating in the program. Elsewhere throughout Saskatoon, invitations to participate in the program are not directed by neighborhood, but rather are triggered by a Police report regarding the specific address.

In 2014, we focused on moving properties in the neighborhood to the next phase in the program. We moved 14% of the properties to the Phase 2. In 2015, we will focus on certifying more properties

In 2014, we provided 2400 email notifications to landlords in the CFMH program regarding calls for service from the previous day. Of these notifications, over 600 or ¼ of all notifications were sent regarding calls for service to properties in this neighborhood. This is a drop of 10% in the number of notifications sent in 2013.

In Pleasant Hill, a baseline was established before the CFMH program was introduced in 2010. The following charts show the difference between the properties involved with the CFMH program and the properties that have chosen not to be involved.

3.4. Short Term Crime Sprees

There has been several short term crime trends noted throughout 2014 and early 2015. In January, 2015 following the release into the community of a person who has a history, there was again a large number of laundry room break and enters. Since crime trends at rental apartments are monitored on a daily basis and statistics are gathered on a monthly basis, we were able to send out an email warning regarding the trend and to request landlords and their residents be vigilant in monitoring their coin operated laundry facilities. This resulted in a call to Police within one week of the notification and the removal of the person from the community. With contacts made through the program, we can notify over 10,000 residences of trends that could affect them.

One landlord wrote “Thanks for all your work in keeping apartment living safe for all.”

4. Summary

The CFMH program has had a significant effect on the rental housing market in Saskatoon. With a combination of education, building security assessments and community development events, we have shifted properties to lower occurrences. For 2015, our focus will be to implement some changes to allow properties with a history of low calls to achieve certification with a commitment to address their property security deficiencies.

Once stable resourcing is secured for the program, we will plan to undertake larger community and provincial initiatives such as the Landlord’s Conference. With the current short term resourcing, our plan is to continue to focus on properties with high occurrence levels and properties located in the Pleasant Hill neighborhood as well as addressing short term crime trends at rental housing in Saskatoon. We will provide particular incentives for landlords that are more active in the program and plan to highlight their best practices and property innovations throughout the coming year.

Appendix A Comparison of high occurrence properties for the past 5 years.

In 2009, we identified 71 properties that had a high level of occurrences. Fifty-one of these chose to participate in CFMH sometime in the past 6 years. Tracking these properties to the end of 2014, 39% of the properties (20) that were participating in CFMH were once again in the high occurrence category. 33% had moved to the moderate category and 28% of the properties had moved to the low occurrence category. Of the properties that chose not to participate in the CFMH program, 68% were again in the high occurrence category, 21% had moved to moderate occurrences in 2014 and only 11% had moved to the low occurrence category for their 2014 occurrences.

Proposed Amendment to Bylaw No. 8244, The Noise Bylaw, 2003

Recommendation

That City Council consider Bylaw No. 9297, The Noise Amendment Bylaw, 2015.

Topic and Purpose

City Council considered a request of the Board of Police Commissioners asking that The Noise Bylaw, 2003, include an offence for refusing to comply with an officer's request for a motor vehicle to be tested for noise. City Council asked that an appropriate amendment be made to address this issue. The enclosed proposed bylaw achieves this goal.

Background

The proposed amendment would create a bylaw offence of failing to submit to a testing of a motor vehicle. This would be a Notice of Violation offence and the fines would be the same as for other offences under The Noise Bylaw, 2003: not less than $100.00 for a first offence, not less than $200.00 for a second offence and not less than $400.00 for a third or subsequent offence.

Strategic Goal

This amendment aligns with the strategic goal of contributing to the quality of life for our community.

Report

The vehicle noise amendments, which includes the decibel level testing provisions for motorcycles, were adopted in May, 2014.

The Saskatoon Police Service continues the rollout of the motorcycle testing clinics, and has completed a series of amnesty testing programs.

Where an officer asks a motorcycle operator to have the motorcycle run through a noise testing procedure, there is the opportunity for the operator to refuse, although this would not be a recommended course.

If there was a refusal, the operator could be charged with obstruction or be charged under the relevant section of The Cities Act for failing to follow the direction of a bylaw enforcement officer.

BYLAW NO. 9297

The Noise Amendment Bylaw, 2015

The Council of The City of Saskatoon enacts:

Short Title

1. This Bylaw may be cited as The Noise Amendment Bylaw, 2015.

Purpose

2. The purpose of this Bylaw is to amend Bylaw No. 8244, The Noise Bylaw, 2003 to provide for an offence of refusing an Officer's direction that a motor vehicle be tested for noise.

Bylaw No. 8244 Amended

3. Bylaw No. 8244 is amended in the manner set forth in this Bylaw.

New Section 5.4

4. The following new section is added after section 5.3:

"Failure to Comply with Request of Police Officer

- 5.4 It shall be an offence for the operator of any motor vehicle to refuse to take the motor vehicle to any site designated by the police officer and have the motor vehicle tested for sound when requested by the police officer."

Coming into Force

Read a first time this 23rd day of July, 2015.

Read a second time this 23rd day of July, 2015.

Subject: Child restraint enforcement

Cst Siraj and Cst Brophy completed a vehicle stop today at about 1400hrs in the Giant Tiger lot on 22nd Street. The stop involved an older white van carrying 6 people, mom and dad, and there 4 children all requiring child safety restraints. One child had an improperly installed booster seat, the other 3 had nothing. The ages of the children ranged from 4 months to 10 years.

Cst Siraj called me for 3 new seats from the SPS and I delivered them to the parking lot. Cst Siraj spent time explaining how to install the seats, having the parents work with him installing them and the fitting the children into the seats. This family was on the way to the food bank, but with the stop being made and the officers unable to allow the vehicle to travel with unrestrained children, the concern was they may not get to the food bank before closing. Cst Brophy went to the food bank and picked up some groceries for the family. Cst Brophy then sat with the young children on the sidewalk while Cst Siraj provided direction on the seat install.

The parking lot was very busy, these officers received many comments of praise from passersby and somebody called CKOM who arrived but the family preferred not to speak to the media. There was a lot of video/photos taken.

The family was very grateful, these two officers were very compassionate.

There was no enforcement action taken during this stop outside of the education and ensuring the safe travel for the children.

Caren,

The below email threads represent appreciation from Saskatoon EMO, Provincial Emergency Management, and Public Safety Canada for the SPS participation in a Bomb Threat/Active Threat Workshop in Saskatoon May 12, 2015.

The event included a number of stakeholders from the City of Saskatoon and other area partners and had speakers from the United States Department of Homeland Security.

This is another great example of the knowledge and professionalism of our members.

In particular I would like to recognize Sergeant Tonya Gresty, Sergeant Paul Pitzel, and Acting Staff Sergeant Darren Pringle for their contributions to the workshop.

Thanks,

Sgt. Gresty,

I wanted to take this opportunity to express to you my sincere gratitude for the leadership shown by the Saskatoon Police Service in supporting the recent bomb threat management/active threat workshop.

My own observations notwithstanding, I wanted to make you aware of positive feedback from a significant number of organizations that participated whom I have spoken with since the workshop. The common thread in all of their feedback was a sincere expression of gratitude for the information that was presented by the Saskatoon Police Service, the open and engaging nature in which they discussed the subject matter with participants, the excellent advice they gave and the overall impression of the professionalism with which the Saskatoon Police Service exhibits in these areas of great interest to participants. To directly quote one major stakeholder present – “Saskatoon Police knocked that out of the park”.

My US counterparts from the Department of Homeland Security who were present were also very impressed with the professionalism, subject matter expertise and engaging manner that the folks from Saskatoon Police Service conducted themselves with. They also indicated to me that they took away new learning from the discussions that were prompted at the workshop between safety sector organizations and other critical infrastructure partners present.

I must truly thank you and the SPS team for the excellent collaborative work you did to support Saskatoon EMO in the planning and delivery of this workshop. Please ensure that this expression of gratitude makes it to those who actively participated and anyone else in the organization who you feel should be aware of the significant impression Saskatoon Police made on the stakeholders present at the workshop.

James

This project has been of particular importance as it greatly increases our ability to respond effectively when called upon by our agencies of jurisdiction and there is no doubt it will be a valuable resource in everything we do. Chief Clive Weighill,

I was wanted to bring your attention to one of your officers. Yesterday around 5pm my family was hit by another vehicle on Idylwyld Dr./25th St. E. Shortly after the accident occurred, Officer Chris Martin (badge number 750,I believe) drove up. Chris was very kind and helpful! We appreciated his patience as we were there for quite a while sorting things out. He was accomodating to our situation and helped alleviate a lot of stress just by being so friendly and genuinely nice.

It was refreshing to have such a pleasant interaction with a member of our city police and I wanted to be sure that it didn't go unnoticed. You have a wonderful officer on your force, and we thank him!

Thank-you!

Hi, I just wanted to point out a kind police officer I seem doing a act of kindness. 12am at the intersection of 33rd and Idywyld there was a older native man in a wheel chair cross the street and was having a hard time getting his chair up on the curb. With a city bus impatiently waiting for him to get out of their way so they can make their right turn. Police driving by in a large van stop in the middle of the intersection turned on their lights and made a tum, and a police officer got out to wheel him safely onto the side walk. So many other people could of help this man. There were people walking past him, the bus driver, people at the bus stop. I want to say thanks, that was great to see that. I was pretty far and my camera didn't catch the greatest picture but this is all caught before traffic started moving. Great job Saskatoon police Cutest thing. Driving down confed Dr and stopped at a red light and a police officer pulls up beside us. My oldest boy looks over and asks why he's staring at him so the officer waves and gives the boys a big smile! They wave back and got super excited!

Now both my boys want to be police officers when they grow up 😊

Dear sps, I was a witness to the young man that was threatening to jump off the 108 th overpass yesterday afternoon. I would like to pass on a thank you and a pat on the back for the officers that were on scene. They did a amazing job talking the young man down and showed amazing empathy after they had the young man in a safe spot. I would have liked to have taken a picture of the officer sitting on the wall beside the man talking to him, the empathy shown was unreal. Pass on to the officers that their great work does not go unnoticed . Thank you

I have been seeing that Saskatoon Police Service as well as members of other emergency response workers from EMS and Fire have been on the ball and working tirelessly in order to help people and keep our beautiful city (Saskatoon) safe and also also working tirelessly in order to help members of the public. I see this in the news releases as well as first hand while I am at work in an area that isn't exactly considered every safe especially at night time. I believe that not enough of us take the time to stop and thank all of the hard working and dedicated individuals who work to keep our city safe and help those in need. I admire the work that SPS and other first responders do on a day to day basis. So I wanted to say a big thank you to all law enforcement and emergency workers across Saskatoon. Keep up the good work!

Hi, yesterday I was driving down Kingsmere and there was someone who was driving extremely close to the back of my car. He continually harassed me from the apartments until Brightwater turn off and there was a lovely women in a cop car who had seen me in distress and turned around and followed us then continued to pull over the car. I am forever grateful as I am a new driver that she saw the situation and acted upon fast... He was throwing things at me and at one point even put a bat out his window threatening me and was on the horn the entire time...

Please if possible pass this message along to the officer who had helped me as I was beyond scared and super thankful!

Sgt. Ken Kane and Cst. Ty Prososky were recently invited down to California to take part in a fitness fundraising challenge with SWAT teams from across the state. Ken and Ty are both members of the Tactical Support Unit here and were the only Canadians to take part in the San Leandro Police Department SWAT Fitness Challenge, which was successful in raising $32,000 for a local children's hospital!!

The Community Police Academy (CPA) is a highly successful program in learning more about what our Police Service does day in and day out. In the 13-week course, registrants will hear from every area of the Service about what exactly they do, the calls they attend and investigate. You have until August 1, 2015 to apply - don't miss out! #SPS Good News: A woman messaged us the other day to thank us after she saw an officer stop to lend someone a helping hand.

"I just wanted to point out a kind police officer I saw doing an act of kindness. 12am at the intersection of 33rd and Idylwyld Dr, there was an older native man in a wheel chair across the street and he was having a hard time getting his chair up on the curb. With a city bus impatiently waiting for him to get out of their way so they can make their right turn, Police driving by in a large van stopped in the middle of the intersection, turned on their lights and made a turn, and a police officer got out to wheel him safely onto the side walk. So many other people could of helped this man. There were people walking past him, the bus driver, people at the bus stop. I want to say thanks, that was great to see that. I was pretty far and my camera didn't catch the greatest picture but this is all caught before traffic started moving. Great job Saskatoon police."

Road safety is a key priority for governments and Police Service's across the province. That's why, one year ago, it was announced that there would be an integrated Traffic Unit with Saskatchewan RCMP (similar to how there is an integrated drug unit and internet child exploitation unit) to increase Police presence and ensure safety on Saskatchewan highways.

Yesterday, members of the #SaskatoonPolice Combined Traffic Services Saskatchewan (CTSS) were down in Regina for the formal announcement of the expansion of the program to Estevan and Weyburn. CTSS will result in an increased police presence on Saskatchewan roads with a goal of ensuring the safety of all Saskatchewan road users.

This afternoon, we celebrated the graduation of the first Saskatoon Police Peacekeeping Cadet Program! One of the goals of the #SaskatoonPolice is to create an atmosphere where youth feel comfortable sharing ideas and building relationships with us. Seeing the pride and determination that these graduates showed today made us realize that we are achieving that goal with this program. For the better part of the last year, the cadets learned to respect themselves and respect others, and that it takes a group effort of everyone working together to succeed.

Congratulations, Cadets, we look forward to seeing you back next year!

Hello,

I just wanted to comment on the disturbance last night at a party on Lennon Cres. [REDACTED]

Two officers subdued a psychotic, drunken male this morning around 3:30 AM.

The officers were verbally threatened and kept their cool and handled the situation with the utmost professionalism.

I am sure this man would have been shot in the US and the officers didn't even draw their guns and were very causal.

The officers did an outstanding job and I wanted to commend them! Good to know these guys are keeping our streets safe.

Thanks,

Subject: Good job to the officer I witnessed this morning!

Good morning!

I am just sending this email off to congratulate the officer I saw this morning at the Tim Hortons on 4th Ave. Somebody came into the Tims that the officer approached, mentioning he looked like someone they were looking for.

The officer proceeded to respectfully ask a series of questions, and what I thought was great, then asked the gentleman to finish getting his coffee and just step over to the side with him to sort it out.

With all the stories in the media lately of how the police are treating people, it is always refreshing to see an actual example of an officer being respectful and doing his job, not the twisted rare occurrences that get all the media attention.

Also to see the officer joke with the guy after and set him at ease was great to see. No idea who the officer was but good job and please keep up the good work ☺

GREAT JOB THIS MORNING.

After a few good arrests with assistance from our four-legged partners over the weekend, we thought this was appropriate! Happy Monday 😊

Cst. Kevin Schwartz was hired by the #SaskatoonPolice in 2006 after a lengthy career in the Canadian Armed Forces. During his time with the CF, he earned firefighting designations in Vermillion, AB, and after he retired, continued to be interested in the profession, now volunteering his time as a Battalion Chief with the Warman Fire Rescue.

On Sunday, he was part of a contingent of Warman Fire responders who volunteered their time to go up to La Ronge to assist with firefighting efforts near the airport. Their duties included back burns, assisting with supply and pump trucks, emergency planning and preparedness and setting fire guards. They also brought up dog and cat food for local pets being cared for by those that remain in La Ronge.

Kevin says that despite being a different kind of service, the experience was similar to his role as a police officer – to protect and serve – and describes it as an honour to be able to assist.

A few weeks ago, #SaskatoonPolice Cst.'s Brophy and Siraj with our Traffic Unit stopped a family in the parking lot of Giant Tiger on 22nd Street. The Constables found that there were several people in the vehicle, including three kids that didn't have proper child restraints, and one booster seat that wasn't installed correctly. Thanks to a partnership with SGI, the officers were able to contact their Sergeant back at HQ and ask him to deliver 3 car seats. Cst. Siraj then spent time talking to the parents and explaining how to install and fit the kids to the seats properly.

At the time of the stop, the officers learned the family was on their way to the food bank and given the time, there was concern they might not make it there before it closed. So, while waiting for the car seats, Cst. Brophy went to the Saskatoon Food Bank & Learning Centre and picked up some groceries for the family. She then sat with the kids while her partner finished talking to the parents and installing the car seats.

Thanks to SGI and two compassionate officers, four kids are now riding around safe and sound, with two very grateful parents.

Dear Chief Weighill:

On behalf of the Canadian Police College, I would like to take this opportunity to express our most sincere appreciation to your department for releasing Darren Pringle in order to be able to assist on the "CIC Course".

Darren Pringle assisted on two courses during 2014 in the role of Assessor. We hope that we will be able to secure Darren's services again on future courses

The success of courses such as the Critical Incident Commander rests largely with the support of the policing community. Pringle's efforts are both a compliment to herself and the Ottawa Police Service.

Your continued individual and departmental support for Canadian Police College training initiatives are most highly valued and we look forward to continued collaboration in meeting the learning needs of the Canadian policing community.

Subject: Compliment of Officer

To whom it may concern:

On the late, dark night of Wednesday, August 12, 2015, I was given the wonderful privilege of having the opportunity to direct traffic with one Saskatoon City Police Officer named Courtney. I was unable to obtain the last name of this officer due to the safety of the officer.

At approximately 22:00 hrs I was driving by the intersection of 25th street and the Idylwyld Freeway, at which point I noticed the train track arms down with lights flashing, among this view was one lady who was lifting up the arms going around in circles through the intersection to ensure safe and efficient traffic flow. Each direction of travel was given an opportunity to move freely through the intersection due to this officers actions.

At this time, I exited my vehicle to help Officer Courtney. For about 30 minutes Courtney and myself, along with a few others, went running through the intersection lifting up the arms by hand to ensure safe and efficient travel as there was no train in sight and the train safety lights and arms had been down for about an hour, while railroad workers were en route to fix them.

Thank you Courtney, and thank you Saskatoon Police Service.

Sincerely,

Subject: Const Matt Maloney - Saskatoon Pride Documentary

Hello,

I recently produced a documentary for SaskTel Max TV on Demand ch 48 & 348 on Saskatoon Pride Week. I met up with Matt Maloney (who just happened to partner way back with [REDACTED] who was being presented with a community service award. Matt became one of my featured people within the film and he, as well as a few other Saskatoon Police Officers are seen throughout this documentary, interacting with the public. It was such an honor to be able to share Matt's success within this film and I just wanted to send you the link to the Youtube version of the documentary. The Police Service may use this documentary in whole or in parts for promotional purposes, and please credit SaskTel Max TV for the footage. I have also arranged to have a DVD copy sent to the Police Service for Matt and for the department to keep in their records.

Youtube link:
<https://youtu.be/uaH7CkDvmjg>

Thank you for all that you do. It is good to know that Saskatoon has officers like Matt Maloney (as well as all the others I met) on its team. The positive response from the public really shows that Saskatoon has a great team that you can count on.

Sincerely,

Subject: Much Thanks!!

Attn: Cheif Weighill

It is with much gratitude that I send this email to acknowledge a much deserving member, Cst. Kalene Scott. On Wednesday, August 12th my two year old daughter had an anaphylactic reaction to something unknown. I raced to RUH emergency with 2 other children in tow and a friend following me with her two children. When I arrived to emerg, I rushed out with my two year old, leaving my friend to manage my van (which I abandoned in front of the ambulance bay), a crying 10 month old, a terrified 6 year old, as well as her own vehicle and 2 small children. It is at this point that Cst. Scott came to our rescue!

She generously offered to stay with our 4 anxious children while my friend parked one vehicle, transferred car seats and ran into emergency to check in on my daughter! While this experience was quite stressful for all of us, I came home 5 hours later with a healthy little girl and a six year old that thought it was so cool she got to talk to a "real police officer who was so nice"!

While these actions are likely quite common for Cst. Scott, the time she took to make a stressful situation easier for us, is truly appreciated!! It is definitely reassuring knowing that the citizens of our community are in good hands!!

Thank you Cst. Scott!!

Sincerely,

Cari Anning

Thank you to the woman that took the time to share this wonderful message about one of our officers going above and beyond the call of duty today.

"I would like to do a shout out to Cst. Gabruch. Today he went beyond his duty to help out my son and I. After being pulled over at a traffic stop, we discovered my license had expired. I don't have any family in the city nor do I have any friends who would help. I needed to get to a license issuer in order to have my picture renewed. I was quite upset I didn't have enough for a cab and had no one to pick me up. I also had my 9-month-old son with me. He [Cst. Gabruch] took the time to drive myself and my son to SGI himself so I could have it renewed. He helped install my son's car seat into his car and talked to him while I was in SGI. I know he didn't have to do this for me and I appreciate it so much. His caring and compassion for others is obvious. When we got back to my car, he even helped me to install the seat back into my car and make sure it was safe. I thank him so much for doing this!!! Police officers often get a bad rap but I really wanted to share my positive story and thank him again!!! His kindness meant a lot to me!"

Catherine M Blok Saskatoon Police have been just excellent with our family. My Dad was recently in a bit of a spot when he was robbed in his apartment. The police were very thorough and great with my Dad. Someone from the Saskatoon Police phoned a few days later to make sure he was alright, very good of them to show concern. Thanks Saskatoon Police and keep up the great work!

JohnCarol Wilson So nice to read a positive "Thank you". So many times the only comments are negative. It is refreshing to know there are civilians who appreciate the good works of our police officers. I, for one, fully believe there are so many excellent officers, and I thank them for their devotion to duty.

Ellen Hunks I love how people still complain about nice things that are done for others. Every police officer I've ever met has been out there to help others. I wish more people would remember that they aren't the enemy. Thanks for sharing. And kudos to him for going above and beyond.

Wanda Parker That's great. I also had a Saskatoon Police officer help me out last week. After a long and stressful day with many, many detours my car ran out of gas on McKercher and 8th in the turning lane...facing two gas stations. Neither gas station had a gas can I could borrow and my auto-plan was sending me gas...in 30 minutes 😞. So I was standing there being embarrassed and apologizing to everyone trying to go around my car and a guy ran up and said he could just push my car right over to the parking lot at 7-11 and that the intersection is basically downhill. I guess I looked surprised because he said, it's ok I work for the city, I'm a police officer and showed me his ID. I didn't get his name and I probably would have anyone help me push the car, but he was the only person to actually offer to help. He pushed the car right to the gas pump. So besides being a police officer he was a really great guy and I appreciated the help an awful lot. There were a lot of people who drove by, but he was "that one guy" who decided to make a difference in my day. ✕

Michelle Lee BIG THANKS for your help tonight!! You guys being down there was a great help this evening when about 5 or 6 cars were broken into at the Christian School parking lot tonight just down the street. It soured a great evening, to say the least, when I returned to my car at the end of the night to discover my car was one of the unlucky few. Fortunately, members of the SPS team caught the 2 hoodlums within an hour of the crime going down. Thanks, again, for your help!

Total Net Budget	$ 80,066,200	$80,351,600	$ (285,400)	(0.36%)

Projected budget variances summarized by major category are as follows:

Revenues	$1,033,000	Over Budget
Staff Compensation	$ 536,700	Over Budget
Operating Costs	$ 781,700	Over Budget
Net Budget Variance	$ 285,400	Over Budget

Revenues

Total revenues are projected to be $1,033,000 (10.85%) higher than budgeted. The most significant variance is anticipated in Provincial program funding which is projected to be $889,200 over budget including $557,800 in funding for a the new Centre of Responsibility (COR) program, $185,700 for startup funding related to a new Predictive Analytics Lab and $145,700 in 2014 carryover funding for the Provincial Integrated Traffic Unit. Other notable increases include $162,300 in General Revenues largely related to Criminal Record Checks.

Staff Compensation

Staff Compensation is projected to be $536,700 (.74%) over budget at year end the net effect of a number of variances. Negative variances include $267,900 in higher than budgeted negotiated salary increases for police personnel, higher than budgeted other earnings largely related to overtime cash outs ($72,800), banked overtime ($169,500), payroll costs ($73,400) and Special Duty overtime ($34,000). Partially offsetting these projected over expenditures are vacancy savings of $35,000 and severance pay which is projected to be $46,000 under budget due to a lower than expected number of retirements.

Operating Costs

Operating Costs are projected to be $781,700 (4.55%) over budget. This is the net impact of variances throughout the Service including $913,400 in non-budgeted expenditures in government funded programs partially offset by $131,700 in anticipated expenditure savings spread throughout operations.

PART B: CAPITAL PROJECT REPORTING

Capital project activity for the first six months of 2015 has been summarized as follows:

Completed Projects

Five capital projects have been completed this year with expenditures totaling $1,335,927. The most notable projects included P2499 Network Storage Replacement ($499,648) and P2119 Radio Replacement ($427,570). Active Projects

Thirty-two capital projects with approved funding of $126.8 million remain active among these is funding of $121.1 million for the New Headquarters Facility. Twenty-eight projects are carried over from previous years. All projects are at varying stages of completion with no significant expenditure overruns expected. The majority of the active projects are linked to capital replacement including approximately $1.5 million related to technology and $1.1million for radios. The following is a breakdown of active project by expenditure type.

“PUBLIC AGENDA”

TO: His Worship Don Atchison, Chairperson
Board of Police Commissioners

FROM: Clive Weighill
Office of the Chief

DATE: 2015 August 21

SUBJECT: Enquiry Commissioner Clark – Operational Review

FILE #: 10,010-4

ISSUE:

At the May 21, 2015, Board meeting Commissioner Clark put forward the following enquiry; “Would the SPS Administration provide a report for the September, 2015 Board meeting on options to engage a third party to undertake an operational review of the Saskatoon Police Service, to evaluate effectiveness, efficiency, and sustainability of our current operational model to ensure we are maximizing our resources in the work of ensuring community safety. Similar reviews are underway or have been undertaken recently in several other Canadian cities and could provide insights into an appropriate review process for Saskatoon.

RECOMMENDATION:

The Board accepts option #1 and directs the Police Administration to proceed with a request for proposal for a 3rd party operational review of the entire service, inclusive of shared services.

DISCUSSION:

The Police Administration and Police Association are fully supportive of a 3rd party objective operational review of the Service. A review will assist with developing analytics to quantify operational needs and potential internal procedures. Similar reviews have been conducted in several cities over the past few years. There are Canadian consultants available to assist with the review.

The Police Administration suggests a review of the entire service be conducted. The review will examine the following areas to improve efficiencies and identify gaps in service delivery;

- ❖ Staffing
- ❖ Overtime
- ❖ Identify further opportunities for civilianization
- ❖ Performance metrics
- ❖ Crime Statistics
- ❖ Technology
- ❖ Call management
- ❖ Investigative file management

“PUBLIC AGENDA”

- ❖ Operational Efficiency
- ❖ Fleet and shared services with the City of Saskatoon
- ❖ Community policing initiatives

The following areas should be examined:

- ❖ Uniform Operations
- ❖ Investigative Operations
- ❖ Administrative Support Operations

The consultants engaged must be well versed with policing. The consultant(s) should have an in-depth knowledge of all facets of policing and have worked with police executives, associations, communities and police boards.

Option #1

A request for proposal is advertised for the services of a consultant group that has conducted such reviews in Canada. This model would have the consultants work directly with an internal team specifically formed to assist with the review. The consultants would direct and have oversight of the activities of the internal group.

The consultants would;

- ❖ Conduct preliminary interviews with the community, Board of Police Commissioners and internally within the Service
- ❖ Examine the context of socio-demographics and specific attributes of the community
- ❖ Formulate performance analytics for front line, investigative, and support/administrative units
- ❖ Track relationships to other units
- ❖ Measure Allocated vs unallocated time per officer and determine appropriate benchmarks
- ❖ Measure response times and determine appropriate benchmarks
- ❖ Review calls for Service – number-type-priority
Compare best practices
- ❖ Identify potential savings and formulate related implementation issues and strategies

The consultant group does not need to be on site at all times. The internal working group will utilize the current systems to retrieve information for the consultants to review.

The cost estimate is not fully known at this time. A Request for Proposal would be circulated and advertised nationally.

Pro

1. The Board receives an objective 3rd party review of the service, led by an outside consultant group.
2. The model utilizes internal staff that can navigate through the service and retrieve information required for the analysis.
3. Less expensive than option #2

“PUBLIC AGENDA”

4. The entire review can be conducted in a timely manner because the internal staff understands our systems and deployment models.
5. Several major Canadian police services have recently undertaken this type of review

Con

1. The review may not be looked at as an entirely objective review because it utilizes the work of an internal working group
2. The cost is less than option #2, but more than option #3
3. Internal staff need to be redeployed from current positions to participate in the working group

Option #2

A request for proposal advertised for a consultant group that has conducted such reviews in Canada. This model would have the consultants bring their own team to conduct the work rather than utilize the services of an internal working group. They would perform the same type of review as stated in option #1.

Members from the consultant group would primarily work on site. Since the consultant group is now managing and conducting the reviews it could be a longer endeavor than option #1.

A cost estimate is not known at this time.

Pro

1. The Board receives a complete 3rd party examination of the Service
2. Current staff are not reassigned from regular duties to assist the consultants

Con

1. The most expensive of the options
2. The consultants will not have knowledge of internal data bases or culture
3. Without the assistance of an internal working group the review will take longer than option #1 or option #3

Option #3

The Police Administration creates an internal team to provide a review for the Board. A team lead by an Executive Officer is formulated with a specific mandate derived by the Board of Police Commissioners. The working group would conduct the same review as mentioned in options #1 and #2, without the assistance of an outside consultant.

“PUBLIC AGENDA”

Pro

1. A request for proposal would not be required
2. The review could begin as soon as the team is formed
3. No additional cost to the police budget

Con

1. An internal team may not provide the objectivity associated to an outside 3rd party review
2. This option does not fulfill Councilor Clarke’s enquiry because it is not a 3rd party review
3. A larger group from within the SPS would have to be redeployed from their current positions, thus impacting operations.

Budget Implications

The Service will reallocate $200,000 in the 2016 Capital Budget, at no additional request to the budget. This figure is an estimate at this time for option #1. Should the Board recommend option #2 a substantial increase to the estimate will be required. Any additional costs will be placed as a 2016 operating budget increase.

CONCLUSION:

The Police Administration recommends option #1. It is a hybrid model that provides an independent 3rd party review, yet is complemented by the expertise from an internal working group. It is the most economical 3rd party alternative. The review will provide the Board with a clear evaluation and suggestions to improve efficiencies and identify gaps, while ensuring public safety. This type of review has been adopted by several major Canadian police services.

The Police Association must be included with any of the proposed options.

“Creating a Culture of Community Safety” Report on the
Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners
Community Consultation

June 16, 2015

The report that follows summarizes the discussions that occurred at the Community Consultation on “Creating a Culture of Community Safety” hosted by the members of the Saskatoon Police Commission on June 16, 2015.

The purpose of the event was to provide a public forum at which residents of Saskatoon could comment directly to members of the Saskatoon Police Commission about safety and related issues. The Consultation attracted 95 people to the event with an additional 189 people listening in via live streaming.

The Consultation featured three components:

1. A presentation by Saskatoon Police Chief Clive Weighill
2. A Panel presentation on safety issues
3. Table discussions between residents of Saskatoon and Police Commissioners and/or panelists.

The presentation by Chief Weighill and the Panel is available online as noted later in this report. For those interested in providing their opinions, the same four questions asked of attendees are also online following the two videos. The comments from residents who attended the June 16 Consultation and those collected online will be captured in the final report to the Saskatoon Board of Police Commissioners.

A recap of the most prominent and/or the most commonly identified issues, as gathered to date, follows.

1. Police Chief Clive Weighill:

- The Saskatoon Police Service is divided into three primary components – reactive, proactive (with significant overlap between the two) and administrative.
- Areas such as school resource officers, cultural resource officers and community liaison officers are important components as these represent a vital connection to neighbourhoods and communities, enabling people to know the officers that work in their areas.
- The 640-person Saskatoon Police Service is comprised of the following components: patrol (45%), criminal investigation (23%), administration (18%), asset management (10%), Chief’s office and public affairs (4%).
- Of all calls for police service, 20% involve criminal activity and 80% involve non-criminal activity.
- The major changes in crime in recent years, as noted by the Police Chief, revolve around the Internet, drugs, social issues including mental health and addictions, traffic growth and population growth in the Saskatoon region.
- The most recent Inshtrix survey indicates that 92% of Saskatoon residents are somewhat satisfied or very satisfied with the Saskatoon Police Service.
- The Police Service indicates it has found a number of areas where efficiencies have been captured.
- Note: The full address by Police Chief Weighill with accompanying slide presentation is available at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hNIFibDsZ3o>

2. Community Panel:

- Tracy Muggli – Saskatoon Health Region
- Candace Wasacase-Lafferty – University of Saskatchewan
- Candace Skrapek – Saskatoon Council on Aging
- Father Andre - Str8up Program
- Sultan Ali - Open Door Society

A summary of their comments:

- For seniors, the perception that the community is not safe is greater than the reality that statistics would indicate. This perception is driven by the growth in population in the city and the increased feelings of vulnerability as people age.
- The Police Commission, the Police Service and City Council were recognized for the collaborative approach that has been taken with health authorities in addressing the care of the most vulnerable citizens. Much of that work is directly related to mental health and addictions issues.
- Building relationships between organizations is pivotal to creating a stronger sense of community safety.
- Public money can be saved by finding the right supports for people at the right time. Examples of this are the reductions in unnecessary use of emergency rooms and the decreased number of arrests of people who have not committed a crime but are intoxicated in public.
- Gang activity has become an increasingly serious issue in Saskatoon. Organizations such as Str8up have had notable success with people leaving gangs by addressing the “prevention and intervention” steps.
- Despite declining overall crime rates, as measured statistically, there is a strong sense that the level of violence is on the rise.
- The answer to “do you feel safe in your neighbourhood?” is more often “no” than “yes”.
- The country of origin for new Canadians has a significant impact on the reaction they have to police presence, driven as it is by their experience with police in their country of origin.
- The external perception of Canada is that it has high standards of living and is very safe.
- The idea of “which parts of the city are unsafe” is often driven by reputation more so than personal experience.
- Partnerships between groups, with specific outcomes identified, are the best path forward.
- The 80% of police service time that is spent on “non-criminal” activity represents the area in which relationships are built which is very valuable as part of a strategy for creating a culture of safety.
- For older adults, frauds/scams are the top crime with elder abuse being second.
- Creating stronger connections within neighbourhoods is very important to creating an enhanced sense of community safety.
- The traditional strategy of “simply locking them up” is not one that will work because the origins of these interactions are typically quite complex. Saskatoon Police Service was noted for a significantly improved approach to these issues.
- Education about police services on the part of communities, and education about communities and the growing diversity of those communities by police, will be increasingly important to creating a culture of safety.
- Relying on the police service alone to create a culture of community safety will not work. As evidenced by an increasing number of partnerships, it is the interaction of a range of agencies that has demonstrated the greatest impact.

3. Community Members / Consultation Attendees:

- a) Do you feel safe in your neighbourhood? Do your friends and family feel safe?
- While statistics indicate that crime, overall, is dropping, the incidence of violence and violent incidents seems to be the same or greater.
 - One characterization of safety was that “men say they feel safe, while women say they don’t feel safe”.
 - The incidences of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls take place in Saskatoon, just like every other city, and significantly impact perceptions about safety.
 - There were many conflicting views about whether people felt “safe in their neighbourhood or community”.
 - Some report avoiding areas or situations they perceive to be less safe.
- b) What tells you whether your neighbourhood or city is safe?
- Factors that make people feel less safe include:
 - The part of the city in which the respondent lives,
 - Media reports on crime and violence,
 - Feeling isolated from one’s community or neighbourhood, and
 - Not knowing one’s neighbours.
 - Factors that make people feel more safe include:
 - The part of the city in which the respondent lives,
 - Connections with neighbours and area residents,
 - Knowing the police officers who work in their area, and
 - Seeing a visible police presence.
- c) Who has responsibility for creating a safe community?
- We all do. That includes police, many support organizations, community associations, clubs, health services and governments.
 - Community building needs to happen wherever we live.
 - Parents have a responsibility to do their best.
 - There is no one / single group that can do all of what needs to be done.
- d) What should be the focus of the police service and other groups going forward?
- Ongoing training of police officers and community resource officers on the demographic and cultural changes that have taken place in Saskatoon
 - Parent Watch and parent councils sharing information
 - Continuing the partnered programs with sufficient funding to enable them to move forward
 - Addressing mental health prevention and treatment
 - Engaging the police service in education about poverty and its related issues
 - Focusing on traffic
 - Focusing on gang activity
 - Encouraging neighbourhoods residents to know each other
 - FASD support
 - More funding allocated to prevention programming support by the city, provincial and federal governments
 - Redeploying police services with additional patrols/beat cops is a welcome addition to change perceptions of “unsafe” communities
 - Educating new Canadians about the role of police
 - Community events that will foster positive gatherings including block parties and/or mini-powwows
 - More media focus on positive stories in our community vs. negative (unsafe) stories
 - Police presence and visibility in communities
 - Getting to know your neighbours
 - Achieving cultural diversity of police officers
 - Greater resources that result in having more police on the street
